POWERS’ EXAMPLES

- Mike asking about Joan and her mother (failure of intentionality)
- Alice’s take on Roberto’s fantasy (failure of identity)
- Soldier and torture (failure of community)
+ Remote tribe and extension of oral tradition
  - Intention
  - Exploitation of shared tradition
  - Violation of expectations and implied rules
A DEEPER INTERPRETATION

• Actions such as LambdaMoo are serious and real moral wrongs...

• Speech acts – performative utterances
  • Transitive and Reflexive performances (196)

• What the agent (avatar) says, intends, and achieves is real [even when mediated by a computer]

• Characters are conduits of meaning (p. 195)
  • Illocutionary force (intentions)
  • Perlocutionary force (social effect)

• Character – controller identification allows harm to a character to become a wrong to a controller. [p. 196]
HARM AND PUNISHMENT

- Virtual world is a moral domain
  - Moral development and psychological harm
- Strong and morally relevant connection between controller and avatar
- What is punishment?
- P is said to be a punishment in the moral sense (not necessarily a morally justified punishment) if all of the following criteria are fulfilled:
  - i) P involves an alteration of, or a withholding of something from, the situation within which X is situated,
  - ii) P is intended,
  - iii) P is intended to be perceived as negative by X, and
  - iv) P is supposedly justified with a reference to X having violated a moral norm.

- 2. Rape
- 3. Harm
JUSTIFICATION FOR PUNISHMENT

- Consequentialist (maximize good)
- Appropriateness (community standards)
- Organic whole (A and RLP are tightly tied) – identity investment
- Indeterminancy (boundaries are not identifiable) – brain and prosthesis
